

About/Support

Welcome to Rambling Ever On.

Our hope is that you will find our content interesting, challenging, funny, and above all, worth your time. There are endless websites you can visit, so we thank you for choosing to spend some time on ours.

What can you expect when you visit Rambling Ever On? I'm glad you asked. First, you can expect honesty. Everyone who contributes to this site is doing so from a place of transparency. There will be no self-aggrandizement. Second, the content will be wide-ranging. You are as likely to find an article on the 1985 Chicago Bears, as you are a piece about First Century Palestine. As likely to find a poem about the weather as you are to find a review of the latest blockbuster film. As likely to find an original painting as you are to find an in-depth study of the Gospel of Mark. That's just the way we roll. Finally, everyone that writes for Rambling Ever On is a Christian. You need to know that upfront. What that means is that everything we write is informed by our spiritual convictions.

In an effort to expand what we do, we have decided to enter the scary world of "asking for money." If you enjoy what we do and want to see it continue and get even better, then perhaps you would be willing to throw a little cash our way. If all of that is true, you can visit our Patreon page to set up a monthly pledge. There are some rewards involved for the higher tiers of giving. Give or don't give. It's all good to us. (Though to be honest, giving would be super awesome.) We appreciate your loyalty regardless what you decide to do. Click the image below to go to the Patreon page.
